

In a circuit simulation system, a simulator and part of device models and circuit models are stored in a server on the Internet, a user sends arbitrary circuit data to the server, the server carries out calculation using the circuit data received from the user and the device and circuit models stored therein, and then the server returns the results of calculation to the user.